Team Organization

Our team was designed around an agile team style. While we may have been a smaller team than what was expected of a project of this size, there was a division between documentation and software development to get as much work done in the time allotted for the project. Each member had a strength and we played to that. For example, our lead software developer who designed a large portion of the backend, had experience in Django so having her on the backend meant having a stronger foundation for developing. Over the month in development, there were a lot of bumps in the road in terms of communication, along with much of the responsibility of development falling to one person and documentation to another.
